1. Live Love Laugh

Live Love Laugh
Blogger	lace1070
About	My Chiari Brain Tail, the difficulties of Chiari (pronounced key-ARE-ee) go beyond balance, as a lack of space at the base of the skull pushes the cerebellum and brain stem into the upper spinal canal, placing pressure on the spinal cord. I have set up this blog in an attempt to keep friends and family posted as I embark on this new journey that I have been commissioned to take. Bear with me ~ along with my experiences, you will likely find some random ramblings about my latest passions, too.
URL	http://livelovelaugh-lace1013.blogspot.com/

2. Finding Optimism

Finding Optimism
Blogger	James Bishop
About	The blog is started by James who has been treated for bipolar disorder for about 5 years now: I was suffering for 10 years or so prior to being diagnosed. My experience with medical treatment is that it can only get me so far. I kept a mood diary for a few years, because I couldn’t work out what was triggering my depressive episodes. I’m certain that anyone with a mood disorder would benefit from keeping a diary. It can help to identify the pattern of triggers and symptoms, and to discover what works in maintaining good health. Despite what most people think, episodes of depression and the symptoms they produce are fairly predictable.

3. Diabetes Mine

Diabetes Mine
Blogger	Courtesy Amy Tenderich
About	The blog is about a gold mine of straight talk and encouragement to people living in diabetes. We all can. I've learned a ton since my diagnosis 5 years ago. With diabetes, you really do learn something new every day. So I started this blog as a place to sort out and share some "diabetes smarts" (pardon the pun) — a gold mine of informational nuggets, if you will.

4. Brass and Ivory

Brass and Ivory
Blogger	Lisa Emrich
About	The blog is started by Lisa, a professional musician living outside Washington, D.C. Her performance and teaching specialties include french horn, historic natural horn, and classical piano. Regarding healthcare and health policy in America, He speak as an individual patient with a little experience and some thoughtful opinion. Multiple Sclerosis can be an excellent teacher.

5. CaringBridge

CaringBridge
Blogger
About	CaringBridge is a nonprofit web service that connects family and friends during a critical illness, treatment or recovery. A CaringBridge website is personal, private and available. It helps ease the burden of keeping family and friends informed. Patients and caregivers draw strength from loved ones' messages of support.

6. Billy Bob's Wild Ride

Billy Bob's Wild Ride
Blogger	Bobby
About	Bobby is writing this blog for Billybob as a journal of this wild ride called LIFE. Billybob is a liver. He cannot communicate except through Bobby. Billybob has end stage liver disease. Billybob is not severely decompensated, but because chronic pain, portal-systemic encephalopathy ,a painful enlarged spleen , and mild hepatopulmonary syndrome, all a result of portal hypertension have Bobby under the weather.

7. The ICI Experience

The ICI Experience
Blogger	Sherril
About	I blog about all aspects of my experience of living with invisible, or concealed chronic illness (ICI or CCI) at TheICIExperience dot blogspot dot com. I'm finding blogging about it all to be very rewarding, very therapeutic, and I hope what I write about may help others in similar situations.
URL	http://theiciexperience.blogspot.com/

8. Six Until Me

Six Until Me
Blogger	Kerri Morrone
About	Diabetes doesn't define me, but it helps explain me. I keep an extensive collection of photos on my Flickr account, where you'll find my Diabetes365 experience, a bunch of crap about my cats, and random photos from my random life moments. I love my camera and bring it everywhere I go. I'm also pretty addicted to Twitter and Facebook, but those addictions ebb and flo with my workload.

9. It's All about the Walls

It's All about the Walls
Blogger	Amanda
About	I'm 37, mother of two human boys, ages 8 and 4, and pet-mom to one geriatric dog

	(R.I.P.) and three juvenile cats. I can also apparently bleed for 22 days and not die. Read on at your own risk.
URL	http://amandajustice.blogspot.com/

10. The Reality of Anxiety

The Reality of Anxiety
Blogger	Aimee
About	My name is Aimee and I suffer from Social Anxiety. This blog is for me to use as a journal to help me through my journey to recovery, and if anyone stumbles upon the page, to hopefully help others dealing with the same problems, or to better understand loved ones suffering from one of the disorders.

11. Prayers for Tracy

Prayers for Tracy
Blogger	Tracy's families
About	Tracy was hit by a car in Florence, Italy on January 15th, 2003. She had surgery on January 17th, 2003 on her right, broken leg and suffered a cardiac arrest in the recovery room. However she never woke up since then. Her families set up the blog for prayers for Tracy.

12. Imagine Bright Futures II

Imagine Bright Futures II
Blogger	Amanda M.
About	My life theme for March 2007 was "Holy crap!" - I was diagnosed with invasive breast cancer at the tender age of 39 (yes, it's the one circumstance in which I get told "You're so young!") and had a mastectomy 16 days after diagnosis. My first blog, Imagine Bright Futures, was about my niece's adventures with a rare liver disease, and the theme holds true for my own adventures in medical land, so I have christened this blog Imagine Bright Futures II.
URL	http://imaginebrightfutures.wordpress.com/

13. Life with Leukaemia

Life with Leukaemia
Blogger	Angus
About	This blog relates our experience of living with a small child, our daughter, with Acute Lymphoblastic Leukaemia - we hope it will provide comfort and information to others in similar situations to our own as well as being both therapeutic for ourselves and a record of what will be surely a profound and sometimes traumatic few years for us.

14. Sunshine and Moonlight — A Journey with Multiple Sclerosis

Sunshine and Moonlight — A Journey with Multiple Sclerosis
Blogger	Kimberly A. Fabrizio
About	I've built this blog, not only to track my own journey for family and friends who are interested in my progress, but also to provide a positive forum for reflection, sharing and community. Remember, no two patients are the same. But, we're all in this together. Let the sun shine brightly! Kimberly A. Fabrizio is the Educational Services Director for WQLN Public Broadcasting of Northwest Pennsylvania (PBS). She has been a cancer survivor since 1998, and as of 2007, a Multiple Sclerosis survivor, too. Kim is an educator, blogger, and motivational speaker.

15. The Big D

The Big D
Blogger	Chris Bishop
About	My name is Chris Bishop and I setup this page as a personal journal for myself and also as an informational Blog for anyone with type 1 Diabetes. I was diagnosed with Diabetes on Christmas Eve, 1987. My wife and children are the reason this blog is here and why I am taking a very proactive roll in my Diabetes management. I realized that I want to be able to enjoy all of the landmark events that my wife and kids will go through. In order to do so, I must really take care of myself so that I can take care and provide for my family. So, that is what you will find here. My life and how Diabetes affects it. I hope you enjoy reading it as much as I enjoy sharing it with everyone. I hope that everyone who visits this Blog will get something out of it.

17. Sick Girl Speaks

Sick Girl Speaks
Blogger	Tiffany
About	After spending over 30 years in and out of hospitals, it dawned on me: I've had a lot of practice being a patient! After getting my first lung transplant for cystic fibrosis, I was surprised to find myself waking up in ICU with another set of donor lungs only 4 years later. 6 lungs in one lifetime? That's a lot of lungs. Taking my patient experience and my love of pondering, I combined them to create a book, a blog and a speaking career. This blog started out as a place to share my book in progress. Now it is a place to share the progress of my life. I don't have a full-length lifetime to say everything I need to so move aside and let this sick girl speak!
URL	http://sickgirlspeaks.blogspot.com/

18. ChronicBabe

ChronicBabe
Blogger	Jenni Prokopy
About	I created the blog in 2005 to provide an online community for younger women with chronic health issues who want to be their best. A ChronicBabe myself, I was diagnosed in 1997, at the age of 25, with fibromyalgia. Soon after came diagnoses of asthma, anxiety, Raynaud's phenomenon and GERD. I'm here to share what I know with you, and to create a space for others to share their successes, so that you can be a Babe too.

URL	http://www.dreammom.blogspot.com/

22. My Cancer Fight

My Cancer Fight
Blogger	Michael Schafer
About	It's been 18 months since I was diagnosed with Squamous Cell Carcinoma... cancer. I started this blog to share the many emotions, fears, experiences and, hopefully, triumphs that I will face throughout this journey. I have two goals for this blog, 1. To gain some degree of personal therapeutic benefit and, 2. To help others who may one day face a similar struggle by detailing the process of diagnosis, treatment and recovery so that they may know what to expect.

URL	http://mycancerfight.blogspot.com/

23. Bipolar Mo

Bipolar Mo
Blogger	Michael Schafer
About	I am a 47 year old manic depressive guy living in Scotland. I have been diagnosed as having Bipolar I. But like many bipolar folks I'm a bit dubious about it all. I am often puzzled why clinicians think that being even mildly euphoric is some form of pathological abnormality which requires treatment. Treatment inevitably means reducing your mood until you are miserable, unhappy and left wondering what aspects of your thoughts and behaviour were part of you and what was the illness.
URL	http://bipolarmale.blogspot.com/

24. Brainhell

Brainhell
Blogger	BH.& Ratty
About	I am a husband and father of two young children. On January 13, 2004, at 41 years old, I was diagnosed with a 100-percent fatal, presently incurable disorder called ALS. (The original writer died in February, 2008, Ratty continued)
URL	http://brainhell.blogspot.com/

25. Furious Seasons

Furious Seasons
Blogger	Philip Dawdy
About	I am an actual journalist, for what that might be worth in the blogosphere. I am also mentally-ill, having been diagnosed with bipolar disorder (more commonly called manic-depression back then) in 1989. I have been an attentive eyewitness to the psychopharmacological revolution that has swept this nation since about 1990. I have seen and experienced the good. I have seen and experienced the bad. I have lived the in-between. ~Ultimately, my conclusions still add up to one man's attempt to make sense of mental illness in America. Please read this blog in that light.

3. Kevin, M.D. Medical Blog

Kevin, M.D. Medical Blog
Blogger	Kevin, M.D.
About	In this blog you will find opinion and commentary on current medical issues by a practicing primary care physician.: My name is Kevin Pho, and I am a board-certified internal medicine physician based in Nashua, New Hampshire. This blog aims to pull that curtain back and "tell it like it is." By shining a light on physician frustrations that the mainstream media may ignore, perhaps we can get one step closer to resolving these issues.

4. Corpus Callosum

Corpus Callosum
Blogger	Joseph j7uy5
About	The Corpus Callosum is an occasional journal of armchair musings, by a suburban, reality-based, slightly-left-of-center guy, who reserves the right to be highly irregular at times. Topics: social commentary, neuroscience, politics, science news. Mission: to develop connections between hard science and social science, using linear thinking and intuition; and to explore the relative merits of spontaneity vs. strategy.

9. CEO Chat

Blogger	Jim Shmerling
About	Jim Shmerling, DHA, FACHE, President and CEO of The Children's Hospital": I have never written a blog before, so this will be a new experience for me. It is my hope I can share my thoughts and ideas about where I think pediatric healthcare is headed and what our role as providers should be. In some cases, I will provide my perspective on external healthcare developments with the potential to affect children's health. I also will discuss our core strategies that will proactively impact the health and welfare of our children. So, why a blog? What makes this approach different is my intent to provide a two-way communication vehicle. I share with you; you share with me. In that way, it is my hope we keep each other informed.
